

FULTON IS WARNED OF FLOOD

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

THE government's farm program, in effect the last two years on cotton, wheat, corn, pork and other basic commodities, is being argued this moment before the supreme court. There had been earlier programs, but two years ago the government, after holding a referendum of farm voters, inaugurated a compulsory production control system with cash benefits paid to the farmers out of a processing tax collected from the consumers. It is the processing tax, and arbitrary crop control, which is being attacked in the present suits.

Pacific Islands' History Darkened by Horror Tales

Death-Ships Flung on Shore Now Held by Air Line Advance Agents

WRECKAGE IS USED

Here's Second Account of Isles on Proposed Route to Australia

Moving forward with plans for a California-Australia air line, U. S. government officials have stationed modern Crucesos on three South Sea isles to gather wind and weather data. How these colonists live and the interesting histories of the tiny isles which they inhabit are told by Ernie Pyle in a three-part series, of which this is the second story.

By ERNIE PYLE
NEA Service Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON—Not all South Sea islands are palm-leafed paradises. Take the three, for instance, Jarvis, Baker, and Howland—that the government is now considering as bases for a California-to-Australia airline, when and if such line is started.

These islands are lonely places. For more than 50 years no human being had lived on them. They are bare and small, and the sun beats down upon them unmercifully. There is no water, no shade. For half a century, only birds, and rats, and crabs have lived there.

Despite all this, these specks in the south Pacific may play an important part in aviation advance. The three isles were chosen by William T. Miller, airway superintendent of the U. S. Bureau of Air Commerce, on a recent tour, as the most practicable stops for ships flying from America to the Antipodes. He visited eight or 10 isles, some inhabited and some not.

Then he employed 12 carefully-picked Hawaiian youths to stay on Jarvis, Baker, and Howland islands for a year, to gather wind and weather data for the government. Four on each isle, they're living like Crusoes, though with more of the comforts of civilized life.

Grim Tragedy
On the brief periods of habitation on the islands, they have known grim tragedy.

On Jarvis Island, 1600 miles south of Hawaii, still lies the wreck of the Amaranth, a wooden sailing ship which disappeared in 1913 with all hands lost. The Hawaiian boys have taken lumber from the wreck and built a wooden house. Also, in the wreckage, they have found skeletons and coal, which they are now burning. They also found a baby carriage.

Sister of China Clipper Hops Off

Philippine Clipper Second to Go in Transpacific Service

ALAMEDA, Cal.—(AP)—The Philippine Clipper took off at 3:17 p. m. Monday for Honolulu, first leg of the second transpacific airmail flight to Manila.

The plane, sister ship of the China Clipper which inaugurated the service, carried approximately 15,000 letters for the Hawaiian islands, Guam, and the Philippines. The schedule called for the Clipper's arrival at Honolulu, 2,400 miles distant, Tuesday.

Story of a Gift

About this time every year the Goodfellows club makes up a fund so that no youngster and no family circle in Hope shall go down the calendar to Christmas Eve unremembered.

It is a story not particularly of Christmas but of every day, and in the tradition of every human race—the tradition that the fortunate shall help the unfortunate in order to wish away future disaster from himself.

The government programs help the needy—but this Goodfellows fund helps also the helper!

Even in pagan lands of long ago there was this admonition to each household: Be hospitable to a stranger—you may sometime need him!

But Christianity goes further than that, preaching the gospel that all men are brothers, and that the abler brother must help the weaker one.

The story of giving is age-old and world-wide. We observe it particularly in the Christmas season. Let us remember the Goodfellows solicitation.

4 Are Arrested in Local Liquor Raids

3 Negroes and a White Man Seized in Separate County Searches

Three negroes and a white man were arrested in separate sections of the county over the week-end as the result of liquor raids by county officers and revenue agents.

Millard Lovelace, white, was arrested at his home, four miles northeast of McCaskill last Saturday night. Officers seized nine gallons of moonshine liquor.

Lovelace has been released on bond, pending a hearing in federal court at Texarkana. Participating officers were: State Ranger J. H. Sewell, Deputy Sheriff Mont Harris, Marshal Herman Morris of Belvidere, and Deputy Sheriff Herb Spears.

Tom Roberts and Norvell Cheatham, negroes, were arrested at the scene of a still, located 12 miles northeast of Hope near Columbus road. A third, negro, Cornell Wright, escaped but later surrendered to officers.

Two and a half gallons of liquor and two barrels of mash was found at the still, a 20-gallon capacity outfit. All the negroes have been released on bond, pending a hearing in federal court at Texarkana.

Raiding officers were: Deputy Sheriff Reginald Bearden; Frank Turner, constable of Spring Hill; and Revenue Agents Ed Van Sickle and C. C. Mitchell.

Reese and Spears Named Co-Captains for 1936 Bobcats

100 Attend Rotary Club's Annual Banquet for Football Team

GIFT TO HAMMONS

He Gets Automatic Shotgun—Coach Ivan Grove, of Hendrix, Speaks

Election of Hugh Reese and K. E. Spears as co-captains of the 1936 Hope High School football team, an inspirational speech by Coach Ivan Grove of Hendrix college, and the presentation of an automatic shotgun to Coach Foy Hammons, furnished the highlights of the high school football team at Hotel Barlow Monday night.

Approximately 100 persons attended, including Rotarians, guests, out-of-town visitors, Coaches Hammons, Jones, Martin and the Bobcat football squad. Roy Anderson acted as master of ceremonies and introduced Rotarians and most of the speakers.

Grove's Speech
High tribute to Coach Foy Hammons was paid by the featured speaker, Coach Ivan Grove, who in his opening remarks said in one sentence about the Bobcat mentor:

"In Coach Foy Hammons you have a good coach, a wonderful sportsman, and a real gentleman."

He then launched into the fundamentals of football and told of the benefits derived from the national game. He talked of sportsmanship, courage, character building, and other helpful factors resulting from football.

He concluded his speech with a ringing plea to keep Arkansas' athletes in Arkansas. He praised the University of Arkansas as an institution of higher learning, and said that one of the finest equipped athletic plants in the state could be found at Fayetteville.

"We have other fine colleges over the state equipped with the best of athletic facilities. Why leave Arkansas to play football? You owe it to yourself and your state to remain here. Think twice before accepting some offer from another state institution," Coach Grove concluded.

Praises Good Season
Other speakers Monday night were Miss Beryl Henry, superintendent of Hope schools, who praised Coach Hammons and the Bobcat team for a successful season.

Don Glenn Durham gave a two-minute talk on moral and team spirit. Assistant Coach Jimmy Jones briefly gave thanks to the business men of Hope, and asserted that co-operation and spirit shown the last year was the best in the history of the town. He said this spirit was a contributing success to the team.

Lawrence Martin, coach of the Junior High School squad, said the most impressive factor to him, during the 1935 campaign, was the co-operation of 11 Bobcat players on the field, working as a unit. Co-operation of players results from a well-drilled team, he said.

Coach Foy Hammons took the floor and introduced the Bobcat squad. He then introduced Coach Ivan Grove as one of the smartest college coaches in the state.

Near the close of the banquet Mayor Albert Graves presented Coach Hammons with a 12-gauge automatic shotgun, a gift from the Rotary club. Syd McMath, representing the Young Business Men's association, presented Coach Hammons with a case of shotgun shells.

Reese and Spears, elected to lead the 1936 Hope High School football team, are juniors. Reese is an end. Spears is a halfback.

Business Cold to Industrial Council

Major Berry's Proposal Gets Off to Slow Start in Washington

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Essential elements of American industry Monday gave a cool reception to Maj. George L. Berry's proposal for the establishment of an industrial council to advise the government on methods of hastening recovery.

Important groups in the conference of industry, called by Berry, President Roosevelt's co-ordinator of industrial co-operation, vetoed the idea or decided they had no authority to name a representative to such an organization.

These developments followed a stormy opening of the business-labor conference called by Berry to discuss industrial recovery. Shouting at one man who sought to speak that he was trying to "dynamite this meeting," Berry was the object of a return shout: "You're an unqualified liar."

Finally, the general meeting was dissolved into group conferences as originally intended.

Hoffman Denies He Will Save Bruno

New York Journal Story of "Pledge" Contradicted by Governor

TRENTON, N. J.—(AP)—Governor Hoffman said Tuesday that any representations that he had pledged himself to save Bruno Richard Hauptmann from the electric chair "are absolutely untrue."

New York Rumor
NEW YORK—(AP)—The New York Evening Journal said Tuesday that Governor Hoffman had definitely committed himself to a vigorous fight to save "the life of Bruno Richard Hauptmann," convicted slayer of the Lindbergh baby.

The Journal quoted the highest sources for its statements, saying: "The governor has definitely made up his mind about Bruno, that he will seek to snatch him from the shadow of the electric chair even in the teeth of a contrary vote by the board of pardons."

This disclosure, the Journal said, "threatened one of the greatest political upheavals in New Jersey's history."

Stage of 26 to 28 Feet Is Forecast in Next 48 Hours

Crest to Reach Fulton Wednesday or Thursday—25 Feet Is Flood Stage

HITS 23.2 TUESDAY

Flood Gate Under Construction South of Fulton Is Threatened

A flood warning on Red river was issued late Monday by J. S. Crump of the U. S. weather bureau, Shreveport. He predicted a stage of 26 to 28 feet at Fulton by Wednesday or Thursday. Flood stage is 25 feet.

At 7 a. m. Tuesday the river had climbed to 23.2 feet, a rise of about 1/2 foot since Monday night. For the past three days the river has been rising rapidly and drift is running heavy.

A stage of 28 feet will flood most of the lowlands in the Fulton area, river observers said. Farmers in the bottomlands were busy Tuesday gathering late corn, fearing that a stage of 28 feet would cause its loss.

Concern is also felt for the new levee, under construction from the flood gate for a distance of three miles down the river.

About a mile and a half of the levee has been completed, but the drift is still soft and it is feared that a stage of 28 feet would wash away a big portion of it.

Editor Liggett Is Slain by Assassin

Man Who Invalidated Minnesota Gag Law Is Shot to Death

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—Walter Liggett, publisher of the controversial Mid-West American, a weekly newspaper, and former editor of Plain Talk magazine, was shot and killed by professional gunmen in the rear of his apartment here Monday.

Isadore (Kid) Cann, Blumenfeld, who served a year in the workhouse following a recent liquor conviction, was taken into custody by police for questioning.

Liggett was returning to his apartment after a grocery shopping tour. On the front seat of the car beside him was a bundle of groceries. In the rear seat was his wife, Edith, and his 10-year-old daughter, Marda.

Liggett swung into the alley at the rear of his apartment and halted his car. Across the alley, headed in the other direction, was another car, its lights burning and motor running.

Liggett stepped from the auto, his arms full of groceries. Three shots were fired in quick succession, apparently from the other car. Liggett fell, the groceries tumbling from his arms.

Liggett leaped from the car and ran to his side. For a moment his daughter was stunned. Then she screamed:

"Don't kill daddy, don't."

Liggett had been a storm center in political controversy since he entered the publishing field in Minnesota about five years ago. He began publishing his Mid-Western American at Red Wing and several years ago moved his equipment to Minneapolis.

During the last few years he had been involved in a number of political encounters and only recently was acquitted of a statutory charge in Ramsey county District Court—a charge which he insisted was a political frameup. During that trial Mrs. Liggett sat by his side and aided him.

The recent attack upon Liggett, who appeared in court a month ago bearing bruises suffered when he was beaten by gangsters, is considered an outgrowth of the long war against the Minnesota "gag" law. The first prosecution under this law, that against the Saturday Press, a weekly of a type similar to that of the Mid-West American, was started in 1927. The conviction of editors of the paper was appealed to the United States Supreme Court by interested publishers and newspapers and the law was declared unconstitutional.

Howard Guilford, a former employee of the sensational Saturday Press, was slain by gangsters September 6, 1934.

The Truth About Diet

By DR. MORRIS FISHER
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Proteins Are of First Importance; Yield Tissue-Forming Acids

Before going farther into the subject of diet, let me classify the various kinds of foods that you eat, so that you may know what each type means to your system. From this classification you will be able to realize better the importance of certain foods for your health.

First, I shall discuss the proteins. These are foods that contain carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen, and frequently nitrogen and sulphur.

The "wheat protein" means "to take first place," and the "meats" really

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

"What's wrong with you, Jean? You've been moaning around all week and I have to tell you everything twice."

"Nothing, mother. I'm all right."

"Well, snap out of it and go and get the dishes done. I have to work on those doll quilts for Christmas."

"Can't I help? I can sew."

"No, these have to be perfect. They are for the Bazaar. You can help more by doing the dishes."

Jean did the dishes and then she was told to study.

"I get so sick of studying," she complained.

"There you go again."

"Mother can I give Lois something for Christmas? And Mill Allen? And I'm sure Katharine is going to give me something."

"I don't see how. I won't have three nickels to rub against another for our own Christmas."

Fear of Spoilage

"I'd do without anything myself. I think it's more fun giving things than getting them. I could make little bags out of cretonne if I had just a few cents."

"We can't give cheap things. Your father is supposed to be a man of means. We can't seem stingy—better to give nothing than some off-hand thing that doesn't count."

Jean did her lessons and started to read.

"Oh, I forgot," said her mother, biting off a thread. "I was to get the paper to make those waxed water-lilies for the Bazaar. Will you go over to Mrs. Belle's and get it? It's all ready."

Jean went off and at the Bells found Lois and her mother dressing dolls.

"May I stay awhile and watch?" asked Jean.

"You certainly may," invited Mrs. Bell briskly. "And if you like you may overstep this lace on petticoats."

Jean beamed with pleasure. "Oh, may I? I'm just crazy to do something for Christmas."

"Your mother has a lot of things to do. Why don't you help her?"

Opportunity to Learn

Jean flushed. "Mother seems to be afraid of having things spoiled. I offered to help."

"Well, Jean, if you want to, come over tomorrow. I am going to make some waxed daffodils. I am going to teach Lois. Would you like to learn? They are lovely for presents for your girl friends and cost very little. Really they are quite as lovely as the ones they sell in stores."

From that time on Jean was a different girl. When her mother discovered how handy she was with her fingers she admitted her into the spirit of Christmas. But even though Jean had been slow at learning, I think her mother should have kept all the holiday preparation to herself. This is the most thrilling part of it all, and children, girls particularly, feel left out if there is nothing to do.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

The famous Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes in Alaska is losing its smoke. Its steaming volcanic craters and fumaroles are to be numbered by tens now, instead of by thousands; before very long it will be a peaceful grassy vale, no more remarkable than any other open place between mountains.

Father Bernard R. Hubbard, S. J., the famous "glacier priest" of Alaska, makes this revelation in "Cradle of the Storms," the new book in which he tells of his astounding researches among Alaska's volcanoes.

He made his way into the valley—when it came into being in 1912, following a tremendous volcanic explosion—last year, and found its spectacular properties rapidly disappearing.

The government, he says, might as well remove it from the National Monument classification and throw it open to hunters and trappers, for it is not going to be another Yellowstone, as people originally supposed.

This change is in line with Alaska's geologic history. The earth is changing rapidly, up there.

Father Hubbard has watched new land in the making, has seen islands rising into peninsulas, has gauged the extension of the long arm of the Alaskan peninsula toward Asia.

He has also found where our own American weather originates. Storms of unbelievable fury spring up in the Aleutians; from them come the influences that determine what sort of winters we are to have.

Father Hubbard has written an uncommonly interesting book. Both the text and the numerous photographs convey an excellent idea of the wild, subtly menacing beauty of that little-known land.

Published by Dodd, Mead and Co., the book sells for $3.

Glorifying Yourself

By Alicia Hart

"To reduce or develop the calf of the leg is difficult indeed," says Donald Loomis, the man who guides and directs the exercises and health routines of important Hollywood stars. "The muscles and tissues of the legs, because they are used so much, are coarser and tougher than any other part of the anatomy and they offer strong resistance to any type of exercise."

"However, one who wishes to improve the shape of her legs certainly can do it if she takes exercise seriously and regularly. In addition—unless, of course, she is underdeveloped elsewhere—she ought to diet. If she is certain she doesn't want to lose except on her legs, then she must depend on exercise alone to do the trick."

Here are two Donald Loomis exercises which will reduce the legs and make them shapely:

Stand on a book or a small, low wooden box and, placing hands on the back of a chair so you won't lose your balance, rise up and down on your toes as rapidly as possible.

Take off your shoes and walk around the room on your toes. Stand about one foot away from a wall, lean backward until your shoulders touch it, then rise up and down on your toes. Repeat ten times—very slowly. Doce excess weight on the legs. Massage helps, too.

If you want to develop instead of reduce your legs, do this exercise: Stand on one foot on a rather high

With All My Love

BEGIN HERE TODAY

After the death of her parents, little NANCY WALLACE, WESTBROOK came from abroad to make her home with a grandmother she never knew, MRS. WILLARD CAMERON.

Dana's half-sister, NANCY WALLACE, resents Dana's coming. Dana's grandmother plans for her young granddaughter to marry rich ROYALD MOORE. Dana, meanwhile, has become attracted to DR. SCOTT STANLEY.

Nancy, who masks her love for Ronald behind an antagonistic attitude, unhappily watches the progress of the romance between Dana and Ronald. Just as she is about to tell her mother, PAULA LONG, Scott Stanley's interest in Dana increases.

Ronald becomes jealous of Scott and stays away. Dana wonders what has happened.

Mrs. Cameron asks Scott to stop visiting Dana, but they meet at a dance and recklessly decide to marry. Mrs. Cameron watches the wedding ceremony with a bitter expression in her eyes.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVIII

MRS. CAMERON kissed her granddaughter coldly, and shook hands with Scott. Aunt Ellen drew Dana close in her arms and, surprisingly, gave Scott an affectionate peck on the cheek. The minister congratulated them. Sarah brought a tray filled with wine glasses, and there was a toast to happiness.

"Scott was rushing Dana away into the gray car, and Mrs. Cameron was turning aside—perhaps to hide the sudden rush of tears to her eyes. She was muttering to herself as she went up the stairs and her dark prophecy reached Aunt Ellen and Nancy. 'It won't last! It won't last!'"

"Where in the world did Dana get the smart wedding outfit?" Nancy asked, her eyes on her sister. "She went out this morning and came back loaded with boxes. Did she suddenly inherit a fortune or something?"

"I'm sure I don't know," Aunt Ellen lied bravely (and for the first time in her life), mentally praying for forgiveness. "She looks very sweet, doesn't she?"

"Write to us," Nancy called from the porch.

Scott grinned at that. "Wish I could take you on a real honeymoon. Mrs. Stanley," he said. "But I guess that's out."

"A honeymoon doesn't mean going places. It means being married to you," Dana said.

SCOTT had started the motor. "Hey—wait!" he said. Stopping the car, he leaned over and kissed her.

Dana blushed. "Just look at these people staring!"

"Who cares about staring people?" Scott said. "Besides it's good luck to start a honeymoon with a kiss."

The car shot forward again. Scott said, "We might drive around the block. Then the papers could say 'Dr. and Mrs. Scott Stanley have returned home after a short wedding trip. Or we might drive around two or three blocks, and they could spread it 'Dr. and Mrs. Scott Stanley have returned after an extended motor trip'."

Dana laughed.

"Or," suggested Scott, "we might drive to our place in the country. And then it could truthfully be said that 'Dr. and Mrs. Scott Stanley left for an indefinite honeymoon stay, their destination unknown.'"

"Our place?" Dana marveled. "Have we a farm?"

"Nothing so important," Scott laughed. "To be exact, we have 25 ancestral acres with a bit of blue lake on them. There's a shack which I've been calling nothing at all, but which, henceforth must be known as Honeycomb House. It has a few odd places thrown together. But at night the stars come out."

He broke off, as though embarrassed by the poetic sound of the words.

Dana breathed: "How perfectly wonderful. What a darling place to spend a honeymoon!"

"He's got something up his sleeve," Dana decided with unerring intuition.

"I'll drive you home before I dash for the office," Scott said.

To Dana's surprise, the car's nose was pointed in a direction exactly opposite to that which would lead to Scott's old-fashioned cottage.

"Where are we going?"

"Wives shouldn't ask questions!" Presently they drew up in front of a large brick building, fronting a busy thoroughfare. They went inside, caught the elevator, and got out on the fifth floor. Scott slipped a key in a door and thung it wide: "Welcome home, Mrs. Stanley!"

Dana caught her breath sharply. Her bewildered eyes met Scott's smiling ones.

"Home? Why Scott?"

"Sit down and take it easy."

"I'll have to. I'm weak from amazement," Dana said.

HER eyes had taken it all in, in that first quick glance, it was one of those efficiency type apartments. Behind the paneling would be a rollaway bed. Back of the door would be a small, gloomy, box-like kitchen. There was an enameled breakfast set in the alcove. The furniture was upholstered in a dull mulberry shade. Obviously the woodwork and floors had been recently "done over." Everything looked shiny and new.

Scott said: "I found I could rent the old house for enough to take this apartment. It was about an even exchange. I rather liked the old house, but it isn't very convenient. And, after all, you're the one who'll be spending most of the time at home."

So Scott had rented that darling old house with its mellow, ivory paneling and lovely old things for this—the place! Because of the electric ice box, because it would be warm this winter and easy to keep. So much easier than the rambling, picturesque cottage. He'd given up his home to make her comfortable.

Dana, her head against his shoulder, whispered: "It was dear of you to think of it—it's going to be play to keep."

"That's what I thought," Scott agreed contentedly. "It has all the conveniences. Hot water every minute. Electric ice box. Three exposures."

"How long is the lease?" Dana asked.

"For a year."

A year would pass before she knew it. She wouldn't begin by letting material things matter. It was the spirit of it that counted. Scott's thinking of her before himself. Wanting to please her. So awfully proud of himself for being able to present her with this brand new-looking and convenient apartment.

"It's a darling place," Dana said, and somehow meant it.

Her arms went around Scott. They kissed. When Scott kissed her like that, what did anything matter?

China Consents to Splitup in North

Area as Large as Texas Separated From the Central Government

PEIPING, China.—(AP)—A new regime in North China, separated from the national Nanking government in all but name, was in the making over the week-end.

It would result in virtual detachment from the republic of an area equal to Texas, with a population exceeding 30,000,000, comprising the provinces of Hopeh and Chahar.

Apparently the provinces of Shantung, Shansi and Suiyuan, originally included in the autonomy program, will not be a part of the new state. Keynotes of the government will be "pro-Japanese" and "anti-Communist."

Terms of a compromise agreement setting up the regime here was reported approved in Nanking by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, leader of the national government. Authoritative sources said the compromise agreement had been approved by Japanese army officers and North China leaders. They said an administrative council controlled Hopeh and Chahar would be created, headed by Gen. Sung Sheh-Yuan, military overlord of the two provinces. Membership on the council would be restricted to North China officials.

Kai-Shek Dictator

NANKING, China.—(AP)—China's government became a virtual one-man affair over the week-end. The political destiny of more than 400,000,000 persons lay in the hands of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek. Three more powerful jobs were given the 47-year-old Chiang, already a semi-dictator.

The central Chinese government Executive Committee elected him chairman of the Executive Yuan, the equivalent of premier. He succeeds former Premier Wang Ching-Wei, who resigned after being wounded by an assassin.

A Prayer For Holidays

Those who watch from wistful windows while the world keeps holiday, Lord, send down Thy love to fold them; take the loneliness away. Some are weary with false hopes, some are bound by crippled feet, some are mother-hearted, yearning for lost folk falls down the street; some are sick for dreams long vanished, some for questions never known; some have lost a comrade's shoulder and must take the road alone. Little, watching, wistful windows—white farms, ringed with northern fir, Pillared portico and lattice where the jasmine dusk-winds stir; Sun-baked cabin flanked with sage brush, city marble terraced white, Or a steamer's port holes streaming gold against a starless night. Bless the patience and the waiting with the tread of homing feet, Pour the wreathed and the weary, wind of courage, golden-sweet; To the fettered bring the promise of far trails and sunny skies, For the doubting and the lonely, set new faith within their eyes. Those who watch from wistful windows, Lord, look down on them we pray; Let Thy love and comfort fold them, and their hearts keep holiday. —Selected.

Kraft to Expand Arkansas Business

New Little Rock Headquarters Recognizes Growing Dairy State

LITTLE ROCK.—Formal opening of the new, modernized headquarters of the Kraft Associated Distributors Inc., here, will be held Tuesday night.

Among officials of the organization who will attend the opening are A. J. Riddle, division manager of the southwest, A. E. Kildena, sales manager of the southwest, L. J. Womack, manager of the Mayonnaise division of the southwest, S. A. Brister, manager of the confection sales, and R. L. Henard of Kansas City, Mo., general manager. All are from the company's office at Dennison, Texas, with the exception of the latter.

An official of the company has pointed out that the new headquarters of the K. A. D. I. unit in Little Rock is a practical recognition of the fact that this section of the United States has achieved vast importance in cheese production as well as becoming a large center for cheese consumption.

The industry of cheesemaking today in Arkansas affects a large portion of the state, it was said. Thousands of dairy farmers in all parts of the state are discovering that milk which they produce and sell to cheesemakers is a dependable source of year-round cash income, it was pointed out.

Because of the realization that Arkansas is one of the leading cheese consuming states, the company has provided sufficient modernized machinery in its plants to meet the demand and has purchased several large refrigerated trucks to distribute the cheese to retail stores. Cheese made by the company in Arkansas not only finds a market in the state but is distributed to all parts of the southwest, including the central market at Dennison, it was said.

The history of cheesemaking in this state is one of swift growth. Ten years ago, cheesemaking was an unknown industry in Arkansas, such attempts made to produce cheese here being largely experimental. Then, eight years ago, the first cheesemaking plant in this section of the south was established at Carlisle. The plant was the result of co-operation between dairy farmers of the surrounding territory and the Kraft-Phoenix Cheese Corporation. Acting in the behalf that, with proper care and attention to the special climatic conditions of the South, cheese which is the equal of any produced anywhere in the United States, could be made here, the dairy farmers of this section guaranteed to provide a certain quantity of milk daily for the new plant. Kraft-Phoenix produced cheese from this milk, purchasing the farmers' production. From a plant whose capacity was originally 25,000 pounds of milk daily, the Carlisle plant has grown to a capacity of more than 100,000 pounds. Improvements in plant structure and constant addition of new machinery have made the Carlisle factory a model of cheese production. Similar units, producing American cheese, have in recent years, been added at Warren, and at Searcy, providing important markets for milk in various sections of the state.

"Persecution" Say Polygamist Group

Religion Is Basis for Their Arrest, Defense in Arizona Trial

KINGMAN, Ari.—(AP)—The cry of "religious persecution" was raised Monday as the first of two members of Arizona's colony of accused polygamists went on trial for "open and notorious cohabitation" with "plural wives."

The long-awaited trial got under way as L. C. Spencer stepped forward from a crowd of settlers who traveled 400 miles for the mountain colony of Short Creek.

He was accompanied into court by Price Johnson, another cultist, who will be tried later.

Sylvia Allred, third defendant, was not present. Her trial was postponed because she is an expectant mother.

"It's religious persecution," protested Bishop John Y. Barlow of the Short Creek cult, as the throng clustered about the courthouse before the case was called. He said the colonists are "the last of the old Mormons who still believe in plural wives."

Charges were brought by Mohave County Attorney E. Elmo Bollinger after he had investigated reports that two women of the colony of about 25 families said in applications for government relief that they were "plural wives."

Among the state witnesses will be Urban Colvin, a former Short Creek resident. He is expected to tell of cult practices.

Supreme Court Is Split on AAA Issue

Division Indicated by Questions Fired at Government's Counsel

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The New Deal's farm subsidies were denounced as bribery and robbery Tuesday in the supreme court.

Challenging the constitutionality of the AAA, former Senator George Wharton Pepper, Pennsylvania Republican, argued that the government "offers a pecuniary award to the farmer who can't afford to decline it."

Court Is Divided

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The New Deal entrusted its farm-aid policies Monday to the supreme court which heard arguments on constitutionality of the legislation. Questions from the bench soon aroused conjecture over a division among the nine justices on the AAA issue.

Justices generally regarded as "conservatives" made inquiries so pointed as to convey an impression of skepticism. On the other hand, questions by "liberal" justices seemed to help Solicitor General Stanley Reed develop the government's case.

At issue was the validity of processing taxes, imposed upon companies processing basic agricultural commodities, to finance government payments to farmers who participate in crop reduction programs.

Receivers for Hoosac Mills of Massachusetts had refused to pay $81,000 in such taxes, and were upheld by a Circuit Court of Appeals on the ground, that the Agricultural Adjustment Act violated the constitution.

Reed, the administration's solicitor general, pleaded that the law did not encompass an invalid delegation of power by congress to the secretary of agriculture, that it did not authorize improper use of the taxing power, and that all its operations were countenanced by the "general welfare" clause of the constitution.

He spoke for an hour and 36 minutes and then gave way to Pennsylvania's one-time Republican senator—George Wharton Pepper—who viewed the processing taxes as part of a nation-wide scheme to regulate local agricultural production.

Notables from all walks of life—New Deal officials, members of congress, diplomats, high churchmen, and even Rudy Vallee, the crooner, together with hundreds of lawyers, looked forward intently as Justices Sutherland, McReynolds, Van Devanter and Butler began firing questions.

Seeking to pin down Reed's arguments supporting provisions giving the secretary of agriculture authority to fix the processing tax rate, these justices questioned him for more than 45 minutes. All have voted against the administration in previous cases involving New Deal measures, and have stood together in most of the famous 5-to-4 decisions of the court. Now and again when the questioning became warm, Justices Brandies and Stone, liberals, interposed more helpful inquiries.

Salesman: "Did you give your help a two weeks' vacation?"

Boss: "No, I gave them four weeks. Two weeks when I went on my vacation, and two weeks when they went on their own."

Mother (to teacher): "I hope that Mary had been as good as gold all day."

Teacher: "No, I am sorry to say she went off the gold standard about 2 o'clock."

Teacher: "Johnny, what is the difference between right and wrong?"

Johnny: "At night when my mother goes out she's a vision, but next morning when she sits down for breakfast she's a sight."

U. S. Army Shows It's Ready for Aerial "Invaders"

As 38,000 troops of the Regular Army and National Guard were concentrated in upper New York State for the greatest peace-time maneuvers ever held in America, special units with newly developed weapons went into mock action against simulated attacks by "enemy" aircraft. Here is one of the high-velocity guns which can send explosive shells against fleets of planes.

General headquarters for the great Army war games were strikingly pictured (top) by an observation plane flying over Pine Camp, N. Y. Those small squares are the tents of staff officers. Below is a stereoscopic height-finder used by anti-aircrafters to determine the range of planes to fire against.

The "ears" of the Army are huge metallic megaphones which pick up the faintest sounds of flying aircraft at night, and exactly indicate the direction. The mobile locator pictured above is in use in the war games at Camp Pine, N. Y. Synchronized with it are powerful searchlights which reveal "enemy" planes after their presence has been detected by these "tin ears."

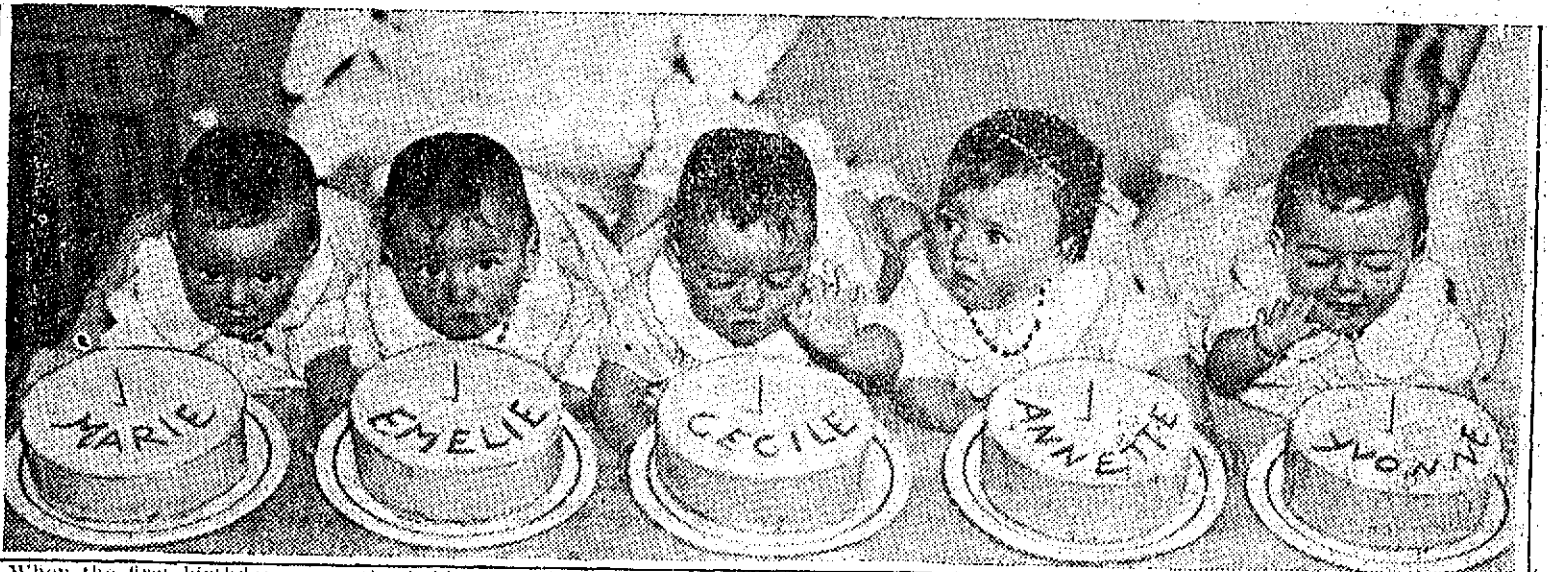

Pictures Taken at 6-Months Intervals Show How World Famous Babies Have Grown

SOON AFTER BIRTH—

A few weeks after their birth, the Dionne babies were tiny, frail, helpless, their very lives an uncertain gamble. Marie, Emilie, Cecile, Annette and Yvonne are shown here in one of the earlier pictures. Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.

AT ONE YEAR—

When the first birthday came, the babies were healthy and lanky enough to enjoy a real party and you'll notice that Cecile and Yvonne especially waded into birthday cakes without hesitations.

AT SIX MONTHS—

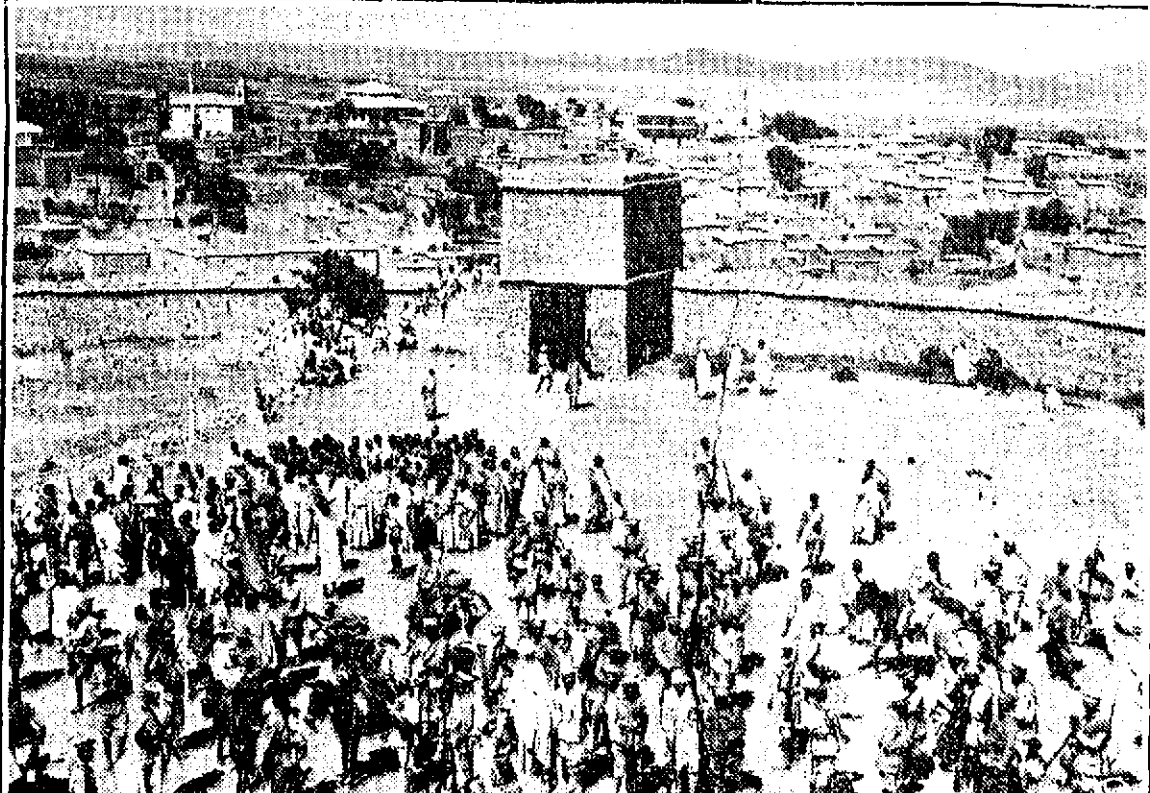

At six months it became clear that the babies were going to have at least a fighting chance to survive. Note how much brighter and stronger they look in this picture. Left to right, Marie, Emilie, Cecile, Annette and Yvonne. Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.

AT EIGHTEEN MONTHS—

And today! Where could you hope to find five brighter, prettier little girls than the Dionne babies? Emilie, Annette, Marie, Cecile and Yvonne are all animation and joy. And such big girls, too!

"Makale Is Ours!"—And Troops Take Over Captured Town

In Makale at last! The advance guard of the Italian conquerors is pictured by Ray Rousseau, NEA Service staff photographer, as they took their ease on an elevation in the town toward which they had toiled many miles under the hot African sun. The native mud huts make a dreary contrast with the gleaming white buildings of European inspiration in the distance.

Not Guilty, Says Mrs. Livermore

Pleading not guilty to the charge of shooting her son, Jesse, Jr., 16, "with intent to kill," Mrs. Dorothea Livermore is shown here in court at Santa Barbara, Calif. She was freed on $8000 bond, for preliminary hearing Dec. 9, and then rushed to the hospital, where the boy was in critical condition.

Crowned Corn King of World

Corn king of the world for 1935 is William Carr Lentz, 24, shown here as he proudly holds the trophy emblematic of the championship, won at the hay and grain show of the international livestock exposition in Chicago. The title was awarded him for his display of Johnson county white corn, samples of which he is holding, raised on his farm near Jeffersonville, Ind.

Grand Champion 'Takes a Bow'

There was a wary look in this Shorthorn steer's eyes, but otherwise he was the picture of dignity as he stood in the ring at the international livestock show in Chicago to be awarded the grand championship in the junior feeding class. With him is his youthful owner, Vincent Baker, 14, of Edmund, Wis. "Hercules Marshall," the proud victor, won from the largest competitive field in the exposition's history and will be matched against senior winners for the show's highest honors.

S. M. U. Is Rated Best in America

Placed Above Minnesota, Though Latter Is in Stronger Circuit

CHAMPAIGN, Ill.—(AP)—Southern Methodist University, which meets Stanford in the annual Rose Bowl game at Pasadena, Cal., New Year's Day, Monday was ranked as national collegiate football champion under the rating system originated by Dr. Frank T. Dickinson of the University of Illinois.

Southern Methodist, first Southwest team to finish at the head of the Dickinson rating, will receive the Knute K. Rockne memorial intercollegiate football trophy.

The Mustangs gained a point rating of 23.01 to beat the Minnesota, winner of the trophy last year. The Gophers had 27.3 with Princeton, the East's outstanding eleven, third at 26.00. Louisiana State University was fourth with 24.00, and Stanford was tied with California for fifth at 23.11.

The championship rating went to a team not a member of the highest ranking conference or section under the system, for the first time. The Big Ten was rated as the most powerful group with a "plus" 3.78 score. The Southwestern Conference was second with "plus" 3.31. Other sections and conferences had "minus" ratings as follows: East 0.00, Pacific Coast 0.11, Southeast 0.12, Big Six 1.35, Southern 3.15.

The ratings:

	W.	L.	T.	Pts.
Southern Methodist	12	0	0	28.01

Site of Wyoming's 'Boulder Dam'

Marking a great step in progress on the $22,700,000 Casper-Alcoya project, which will reclaim 68,000 acres of land in central Wyoming and provide power to develop the region's vast mineral resources, the giant 240-foot-high Seminoe storage dam soon will begin to take form across the rugged North Platte river canyon pictured above. Lines painted on the wall at left, marking location of a dam abutment, indicate height of the barrier, which will impound 1,020,000 acre feet of water. The footbridge crossing the river in the foreground marks approximate location of the upstream toe of the dam.

Pacific Islands

but they don't know what to do with it. There are no graves on Jarvis Island—where the crew of the Amaranth went, there are no graves.

Baker Island, a little spot 1000 miles west of Jarvis, has had its days of anguish, too. Guano diggers lived there from 1857 to 1879. A workman known only as N. E. B., left on Baker Island to keep watch during the winter of 1869, wrote to the New York Times:

"For eight months I have been a voluntary exile from society, and for two months literally imprisoned because of tremendous seas. I cry at the ocean with mixed emotions. . . the sea is the haunt of murderers and sharks. . . the surf rages violently from November to March."

And another time: " . . . the air above the island is alive with birds which swarm like the flies of Egypt's plague. Their discordant dim echoes in your ears day and night. The trade winds are the breath of life. When they stop, the spirit sinks. The shore and the sea become dazzling mirrors that torture the sense of sight."

A Tough Landing
A ledge of coral rock, just under the water, extends out from the shores of the island, clear around, for about 500 feet. Then the ocean comes to a sudden drop, so straight and so deep that ships' anchors can't even find bottom.

The great swells of the Pacific roll up over the reefs, and the water roars and leaps so at times it is impossible to take a boat through it.

What good, you might ask, would such a place as this be for an airplane landing base? That question was put to the men of the Bureau of Air Commerce, and they answered it this way:

"You couldn't, of course, take a seaplane through the surf and up to the beach even in good weather. But for a couple of thousand dollars, we could build a pier from the shore out beyond the reef. Planes could be brought up to the end of the pier in almost any kind of sea."

And the islands, bleak as they are, could be made aeronautical outposts. It would be no trouble to send enough material by boat to build radio stations, administration buildings, and permanent living quarters.

You could always find adventurous-spirited men to live on them. And a supply boat would come, every month or so, with gasoline and supplies for the camp. It would be lots better than living in a city slum.

Tragedy of Sea

Baker Island has seen some sad sights. For instance, the time an American and a Hawaiian were living on the island alone in the '60s, during a lull in the guano digging.

One day they saw a Chinese junk out at sea, headed right for the reef. The two men ran to the beach and, shouting and waving, pointed out the channel which led through the reef. The Chinese at the tiller, laying flat on the deck, understood, and steered the junk safely through.

The island inhabitants went on board. They found the Chinese at the wheel a living skeleton. Below decks, they found another Chinese, unconscious. He was finally revived to tell what had happened.

A hurricane off the coast of China had dismasted the ship, blown it far out to sea, and left it drifting. There were nine men aboard. They drifted for five months. Seven of the nine died of thirst. There was plenty of food, but no water.

They drifted for 4500 miles. They had passed within shouting distance of ships, but no one paid any attention. Both probably would have been dead in another 24 hours, if they hadn't drifted into Baker Island.

In 1863 a Japanese junk drifted past Baker. The guano diggers went out and found every man on board dead. There are 18 graves on Baker Island. The weather has washed away all inscriptions. Some of the dead, probably, were guano diggers. Maybe some were sailors who died at sea, and were brought ashore for burial.

On the Equator

The three islands are right on the equator. Consequently, you would imagine they would be very hot. Especially since the land is flat and low, and here is no vegetation except scratchy brown weeds. Well, they are very hot. But it's a funny kind of heat.

In the daytime, the temperature rarely goes above 80. Yet the sun is so bright the boys go naked, except for a sarong around the middle and they are burned almost black. They have to wear colored goggles. The trepid sun, reflecting on the dazzling white sand, would ruin their eyes.

But at night, here! The temperature seldom goes below 70, yet it is very cold, and the boys sleep under three heavy woolen blankets.

There is a constant wind during the day of about 14 miles an hour. It's cool enough if you can just get in the shade, but the only shade is a tent roof. At night the wind dies down.

There are no mosquitoes and no snakes, and no bedbugs—yet. But two of the islands, Baker and Howland, are alive with rats. Big ones, six inches long. The boys have fished tin around the table legs, so the rats can't crawl up. Jarvis Island has no rats.

All the islands have crabs. The coconut crabs look like lobsters, and are mighty fine eating. Hermit crabs look like snails, are about as big as a baseball, and roam all around the camp, eating crumbs. They are really nice housekeepers, the boys say.

As flat and as small as the islands are, there is no reason to believe that they have ever been washed completely over by water. That would be a pretty pass, for the cutter to go back and find everything gone. But there's not much danger of that.

Parmelee Traded to the Cardinals

Ace of Giant Pitching Staff Acquired by St. Louis Ball Club

CHICAGO.—(AP)—The New York Giants Monday night announced that Pitchers Leroy Parmelee and Allyn Stout, Outfielder Phil Weintraub and Second Baseman Al Cuccinello have been traded to the St. Louis Cardinals for Second Baseman Burgess Whitehead.

The announcement was made by Horace Stoneham, son of Charles A. Stoneham, owner of the Giants, here for the opening of the annual major league meeting. In discussing details of the famous "mystery" deal made by the Giants and Cardinals at the minors league meetings in Dayton, Ohio, last month.

Parmelee, a big-right-hander, won 14 games and lost 10 with New York last season. Stout was used chiefly as a relief hurler. Cuccinello, a youngster and a brother of Tony Cuccinello of the Brooklyn Dodgers, served in utility roles.

Weintraub, a Chicago youth who went up to the Giants from Nashville of the Southern Association, showed talent as a hitter, but was unable to make a regular place for himself in the New York outfield. He also sat in occasionally for Manager Bill Terry at first base.

Parmelee, one of the "big four" of the Gnat hurling corps, won 10 victories against six defeats in 1934, but was hampered by a sore arm part of last season.

Whitehead, hailed as the likely successor to Manager Frankie Frisch as the Cardinals' regular second baseman, appears to be just what the Giants need to repair their infield. Hushie Critz, tiny veteran who starred for New York for several years, was out of action a good share of last season because of injuries and apparently hadn't another full campaign in his system.

It was indicated that Weintraub will either be used for trading purposes by the Cardinals or will be sent to one of the St. Louis "farms," possibly Columbus of the American Association.

Stout already has served with the Cardinals, and later was with the Cincinnati Reds before going to the Giants.

Rumors drove Connie Mack into hiding tonight. Connie, tired and hoarse after denying at least a score of reports as to the disposition of his stars, hid for a while, and then came out to announce that he had nothing to say.

The latest and apparently best report was that he had completed the sale of Jimmy Fox, Eric McNair, Roger Cramer and Johnny Marcum to the Boston Red Sox for $300,000, and Pitcher Jim Welch, Outfielder Carl Reynolds, and possibly Infielder Bill

Honorary Degree Given Roosevelt

Notre Dame Praises "Invincible Courage" of the President

SOUTH BEND, Ind.—(AP)—President Roosevelt was praised for "invincible courage" Monday as Notre Dame University conferred an honorary degree upon him.

The university citation said: "On a leader and a ruler who, with faith and invincible courage when other brave men were faltering, took the reins of government at a crisis which threatened with collapse and chaos the civilization and institutions of our country and the rest of the world; and who is now by achievement even more than by official position the first citizen of our republic—the Honorable Franklin Delano Roosevelt, president of the United States."

For Carlos Pena Romulo, editor of Manila, F. I., the university's citation said: "On an eminent Catholic journalist, orator, educator, and public servant, who has had a leading part in the establishment of the newest nation, a man who by his convincing championship of Christian principles has won the confidence and support of his people, the Honorable Carlos Pena Romulo, of Manila, Philippine Islands."

Personal Sanction

LONDON.—(AP)—Mistress Jane Beik, of Grasmere, Westmoreland, has applied personal sanctions against Italy in a codicil to her will.

The codicil revokes a power of appointment which she made in favor of Colonel Eduardo Benfratello, husband of her daughter Enid, to whom she leaves one-fifth of her estate of $600,000 in trust for life.

She said she had added this codicil "in consequence of the present unfriendly attitude of the Italian government, justified by the violent abuse of England in the Italian press."
